Overview

The International Development Association (IDA), a member of the World Bank Group, provides concessional loans, grants, and debt-relief through the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative and the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative (MDRI).

Achievements and progress

- For the second successive year the WB-IDA is ranked in the 'very good' category and is the highest performing multilateral development bank.
- The WB-IDA publishes all indicators to the IATI Registry, barring the budget identifier.
- It has improved its budget information at the activity and organisational level. Disaggregated budgets of three years and activity budgets are now published to the IATI Registry.

Challenges and room for improvement

- The WB-IDA publishes the organisation budget only for the year ahead.
- It does not provide any results data.

Recommendations

- The WB-IDA should aim for monthly publication to the IATI Registry.
- It should provide forward-looking organisation budget for the next two or three years. It should also start publishing results data.
- It should share best practice with other World Bank members and develop a strategy for internal and external use of its data by all stakeholders, in particular at country level.
